What is Radical Cystectomy?

Radical cystectomy is a surgical procedure to remove the bladder. It is typically performed to treat bladder cancer or prostate cancer that has spread to the bladder.

During radical cystectomy, the surgeon removes the bladder, as well as surrounding lymph nodes and tissues. In some cases, the surgeon may also need to remove other organs, such as the prostate gland or part of the urethra.

What is Chemotherapy?

Chemotherapy is a type of cancer treatment that uses drugs to kill cancer cells. Chemotherapy can be given intravenously (IV), orally, or through a port that is surgically placed in the chest.

Chemotherapy can be used to treat bladder cancer or prostate cancer that has spread to other parts of the body. It can also be used to shrink tumors before surgery or radiation therapy.

Recovery from Radical Cystectomy and Chemotherapy

Recovery from radical cystectomy and chemotherapy can be a long and challenging process. It is important to be patient and to follow your doctor's instructions carefully.

The recovery process can vary depending on the individual patient and the extent of their surgery and chemotherapy. However, there are some common side effects that many patients experience, such as:

- Fatigue
- Nausea

- Vomiting
- Hair loss
- Lymphedema
- Sexual dysfunction

It is important to seek medical attention if you experience any side effects that are severe or that do not improve with time.
